

Most Irish limited companies that have an executive pension set up for it's Directors (and even employees) are in a situation whereby the Company is actually a Trustee of the Pension Scheme. This has been standard practice for a long time. The pensions board now require all pension trustees to complete an online training course every two years. This in turns mean that the Directors must complete the course. More information can be found at <http://trusteetraining.pensionsboard.ie/>
